Appearances point to Johann Most as the arch-conspirator. This trail shows at intervals all through the plot. State's Attorney Longnecker and Inspector Bonfield are satisfied with the outlook as b the four Bohemians, but their heart yearn for Most. They are convinced that he belongs in the dock with the four Bohemians, and no stone will be left unturned to put him there. This will be a difficult matter, and they don's pretend to deny it.

Neither will they move toward his arrest until his crime can be brought bome to him without chance of mis-carriage of justice. Bonfield is workng steadily and patiently and with considerable hope of success. Con-siderable information, which from the nature of things cannot be made pullie, is already in his hands, and there is a chance at every turn that the missing links may be picked up. It can be said, however, that documents of various kinds found in the posses-sion of the prisoners lead the trail outside of Chicago and in the direction I New York.

Rony Crane, one of Beale's head men, a daring fighter, started in pursuit of Fray's band. Fray heard of it, and, cluding his pursuer, rode into Lancaster at the head of his band while Crane was absent. His men were armed to the teeth. Holding the angry citizens at bay, they surrounded Crane's house and burned it to the ground. The people were powerless to interfere. After the burning of the house the robbers beat a retreat, and as they alloped cut of town shots were fired at them, but it does not appear that any of them were hit. An indignation meeting was held, and a posse of armed men was organized to follow the trail of the bandits to the mountains and capture them dead or alive.

Locally we shall insist that certain ordi-nances shall be enforced. There is one ordinance regulating the length of freight trains which, if enforced, would be of great benefit to every railroad man in Chicago. The ordinance limits the length of such trains to twenty cars. No attempt has ever been made to enforce it. The strict enforcement of the twenty-car ordinance would lessen the danger to every employe and give work to hundreds of men who are now idle.

RHINGELOW, N. Y., July 20, 1888.

My Phan Governon: I have had a lingering hope that I might be able to accept the courteous invitation of the Republican League of Vermont, with which you honor me, and be present at your meeting at Burlington on the 28th. I very much regret to find that pressing duties here and in New York next week render it impossible for me to avail myself of this tempting invitation. Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to revisit it, my birth place and native State, to exchange reminiscences with old friends and greetings with new ones; but this is, I trust, only a pleasure postponed. I doubt not the grand success of your gathering.

The country at this moment looks upon her movements with pride, confident that early in September she will achieve the first victory of the campaign, under the glorious banner which our mutual friend, the Hon. Warner Miller, raised at Chicago: "American wages for American workmen; American markets for American people, and protection for American homes." I beg you will present my kind regards to Governor Ormsbee and thank him for his kind offer to join me in a visit to Shoreham. With renewed regrets and thanks, believe me, very faithfully and truly yours.

STILL IN THE WELL A Man Who Has Been Imprisoned for

Seven Days. Jourstown, Nen., July Anderson has been imprisoned in the 150-foot well, which he was engaged in digging, just a week to-day. The upper part has come together in such a way that he cannot come out. A new well was at once started near by, and it is the intention when it has reached a sufficient depth to tunnel into the old well. The new well is lown fifty-eight feet, and the diggers down fifty-eight feet, and the digrers are at work tunneling. They think they will strike in about three feet below the man. From this tunnel they aim to let the boards extend out nearly across the old well, so as to form a platform. Anderson says if they do this he can come to them. The great danger will be that when they strike the old well it may give way and let sand in out the man and they strike the old well it may give way and let sand in on the man and smother him instantly.

They talk with him frequently and he gives them his views as to the best way to work. Yesterday he asked about his cattle and wanted to know who was attending to them. When asked if he would like to have them put a pipe to him in the old well and try to get food and water to him, his answer was "No." He said it was too risky and he was unwilling to take such chances for a few luxuries. At 10 o'clock the digrees were frightened out of the new well just as they were about to reach the old one. Anderson told them that his hours were getting short and if they rescaed him is must be done soon.

Hearing this Archer, as a fast resort, went into the old well and began working again. He soon discovered there was only twenty six inches of saint and boards to go through. After getting the saind away he raised one board and gave sand away he raised one board and gave Anderson food and water, the first he has had for six days. The first thing given him was a wet rag, then a bottle of water, after which a hard biscult. Anderson said the wet reg was the best thing his had tasted in his life.
